Boileau, Racine, Furetière, etc.: Chaplain décoiffé; a battle of parodies, by G. L. Van Roosbroeck. New York (1932).

80 p. 20". (Publications of the Institute of French studies, Inc.)

Three 17th century anonymous parodies of Corneille entitled "Colbert égaré", "Bouillies: ou, La décadence de Colbert", and "Chaplain décoiffé", with a discussion of their authorship. "Colbert égaré" has been attributed to the Boileau brothers, Gilles and Nicolas. "Bouillies: ou, La décadence de Colbert" has been ascribed to Michel de Pure. "Chaplain décoiffé", apparently the work of several hands, has been variously ascribed to Nicolas Boileau, Furetière, Gilles Boileau, Racine, and Chaplain.

Vasili, Paul, comte, pseud.

The studies on society at the capitals of Europe (La société de Berlin, La société de Londres, etc.) originally published in the Nouvelle revue, and later (1884, etc.) in book form, under the name "Comte Paul Vasili" were generally attributed to Mme. Juliette Adam. (cf. Vapereau, 1893) The authorship, in part, of La société de Rome and La société de Paris has also been ascribed to Henri Durand-Morinbeau, known under the pseudonym Henri des Houx. More recently these and other works have been accredited with strong probability to Élie de Cyon (Elias Zyon) with the exception of La société de Berlin, which is assigned to Auguste Gérard. (cf. The "Marquise de Fontenay" in the Washington post, Dec. 1, 1913)

Vasili, Paul, comte, pseud. (Card 2)

In 1914 appeared: "Behind the veil at the Russian court," and "France from behind the veil" by Comte Paul Vasili; in 1918 followed "Confessions of the Carina" by Comte Paul Vasili, author of "Behind the veil at the Russian court," "La société de Berlin"; also in 1918, shortly after: "Rasputin and the Russian revolution," by Princess Catherine Radziwill (Comte Paul Vasili), author of "Behind the veil at the Russian court"; etc.; the dedication in "Rasputin" to Jean Finot, is signed "Catherine Radziwill (Catherine Kolb-Darwin the present name)". In the introduction to the "Confessions of the Carina" the Princess, under the name Paul Vasili assumes the authorship of "La société de Berlin" sent in the form of letters to Mme. Juliette Adam, and published in N.

Vasili, Paul, comte, pseud. (Card 3)

Nouvelle revue ... "Poor Mr. Gérard" she writes "... was accused of being the author of this book, an accusation ... from which I am happy to relieve him. The success of La société de Berlin induced Madame Adam to publish other letters in the same style, devoted to other European capitals with which, however, I had nothing to do, except those dealing with St. Petersburg life. The pseudonym of Comte Paul Vasili remained a kind of public property divided between the Nouvelle revue and my poor self ..."
